Forecast For Scotland
Issued by Met Office Aberdeen
at 0400 on Sunday 14 Feb 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Outbreaks of sleet or snow turning increasingly to rain. Windy.

Today:
Mostly cloudy with outbreaks of sleet or snow and a risk of freezing rain leading to ice in places. The precipitation becoming mainly rain this afternoon and evening. Windy with severe gales across Hebrides.

Tonight:
It will become drier overnight with a few clear periods, especially in the northeast. Scattered showers will follow to western areas, heavier in northwest. Strong winds gradually easing.

Monday:
Mainly dry, rather cloudy but there will be some light showers, mostly in south and west. Continuing to turn milder with a gradual thaw of lying snow. Lighter southerly winds.

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
A rather cloudy and milder few days. There will be rain at times, especially in the the south and west. Windy at times too.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.